British and Irish Writers on Agriculture.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS is a Bibliography of some 1300 British and Irish writers on the Agriculture of the United Kingdom, from the earliest printed books until, and including, the year 1900. For reasons which seemed sufficient to me, I have laid down certain arbitrary rules of inclusion and exclusion Included are books on Agricultural Chemistry, Botany, Grasses, Weeds, Drainage, Improvements, Weights, and Measures.

Included are all those writers who used initials, or pseudonyms, or being anonymous, have been subsequently identified. Even when a work published anonymously has been by authority attributed to a known writer, I have included it.

The omissions have been a formidable difficulty. Manuscripts, Anonyma, British Writers on Foreign or Colonial Agriculture, and English translations of Foreign Writers; Serials, Journals, Herd Books, and Catalogues, seem to me to be clearly outside the scope of my work: yet I must confess that, knowingly, I have included some translations, which have been enlarged and adapted by the English Translator, as for example:—

GOOGE, BARNABE.

“Four Bookes of Husbandrie by M. Conradus Herebascius. Newly Englished by B. Googe.” 1577.

CHURCHY, G.

“A new book of Good Husbandry, translated from the Latin of Dubravius.” 1599.

MARKHAM, GERVASE.

"Whole Art of Husbandrie (Heresbach)."

FLEETWOOD.

"Curiosities of Nature and Art in Husbandry."
1707. (A translation of Abbé de Vallemont).

Such books have become current as English agriculture and their foreign origin has been generally ignored.

Investigation has discovered some few colonial writers on Agriculture, which I have included when the matter is not distinctively colonial or tropical. But I have regretfully omitted many excellent American writers. Such Books as LIVINGSTON, "On Sheep," with Cobbett's Preface. London, 1811; or STORER'S "Agriculture in some of its relations with Chemistry." London, 1887, are so familiar, that one forgets that they are by American writers. Again what is one to say about this harmless title :—

TATHAM, WILLIAM.

"National Irrigation, or the Various Methods of Watering Meadows. 1801."

But according to the Dictionary of National Biography, Tatham, a Cumberland man, went to America in 1769, served in the American army, fought against us, returned to England in 1796 till 1805, and committed suicide in 1819 in Richmond (Virginia) Arsenal. However I have included him in the hope that he wrote his book while he was still an Englishman.

There is one exception to the exclusion of Foreign writers which I have made; this is the writer Charles Vancouver, an American gentleman, whom Sinclair, the President of the Board of Agriculture, secured to write the Agricultural Reports on the Counties of Cambridge, 1794, Essex, 1795, Devon, 1808, and Hants, 1810; unless Vancouver had been included, the series of County Reports would have been incomplete. Very little attention has been paid to these remarkable Reports. They are a mine of agricultural knowledge which has scarcely been explored.

In an article in the R.A.S.E. Journal for 1898 on "The Board of Agriculture, 1793-1822" Sir Ernest Clarke has something to say about them, and gives a list of the Authors of the Reports on each of the English and Welsh Counties, both in the preliminary (Quarto) issue, and in the final (Octavo) edition. But he omits to give the list of the Scottish Reports, and does not mention the little known Irish Reports.

In an appendix I have attempted to make the series for each of the three countries as complete as possible: but I shall be agreeably surprised if no one makes any additions to them. Even the Library of the R.A.S.E., which inherited the Board of Agriculture's Library and Arthur Young's Library, lacks seven of them.

Between the Schedules of the Board of Agriculture Reports, which I am printing at the end of this book, and the individual entries under authors, some discrepancies will be found, particularly in the case of the Octavo editions. Possibly the authors of some of the Reports did not meet the Board's standard, and their Reports were superseded by the work of the later writers. For example, the County of Essex, written by the Messrs. Griggs in 1794, which contained only twenty-six pages, was followed in the next year by C. Vancouver's Report of 213 pages; while the tireless Secretary, Arthur Young, in 1807, produced the Octavo Report in two volumes of 873 pages. But in some cases the Octavo Reports were published without dates, others were published from London, Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Glasgow, Perth, Paisley, Bath, York, etc.; and were reprinted as second and third Editions, sometimes without any clear indication of the number of the Edition in question. For instance, Bailey and Culley's Northumberland, third Edition, 1805, 8vo, was preceded by the same writers' first Edition of 1794, 4to, and, issued with it in one volume, were the same writers' Cumberland, and Pringle's Westmoreland, both undated, the paging being continuous.

But the distinction which I have tried to draw between Agriculture, and some Sciences and Arts which are associated with it, has proved to be almost impossible. Moreover the compilers of lists of Agricultural writers who have preceded me have one and all been unduly catholic in their inclusions, particularly in respect of Horticulture, Forestry, Surveying, and Veterinary. Each one of these four subjects is worthy of a separate bibliography. I have endeavoured rigidly to exclude books on:—

General Chemistry and Botany.

Timber, Forestry, Planting, Gardening, Surveying, and Land Measurement.

Veterinary or Farriery.

Agricultural Law.

Estate Management and Agricultural Valuation.

Agricultural Education.

Quite indefensible logically, but none the less expedient, is my omission of books on Cider and Orchards ; on Poultry, Bees, and Goats.

Veterinary Science is a modern development of Farriery : but there is to be found among the 17th and 18th Century writers quite a number of books professing to deal in an amateur way with the disorders of animals as ancillary to the general care and management of stock. Markham's Maisterpiece, 1615, and Mascal's Government of Cattel, 1614, are instances of the kinds of book which I have included. A bibliography of Veterinary Science would prove most interesting, at any rate to anyone who would undertake its compilation !

Another quite considerable group, which some bibliographers have included under Agriculture, but which with some confidence I have omitted, may be classified as Farm Architecture, designs and descriptions of Farm Houses, Farm Homesteads and Rural Cottages.

And finally there is a huge literature in association with agriculture which may be grouped under Politics and Economics, but which to my thinking is sufficiently far removed from the art of agriculture. Applying the test "Is this an agricultural book ; a book of instruction in the Practice of Farming ?," I have omitted, as far as I can discover, all books on agricultural Politics. Only those who have searched the literature on the subject can have any conception of the immensity of the output of writing on polemical Topics such as Tithes, Rates and Taxes : the battle over the Enclosure Acts : the Corn Laws, with Free Trade and Protection ; the condition of the Peasantry and of Agricultural Labourers.

Agricultural Labour has engaged the pens of many writers. Only by examination of each book could one even approximately decide that it is distinctively agricultural, or political, or historical. For instance, Cobbett's Cottage Economy is obviously to be included : but I have omitted such books as Hancock, W. N., On the Condition of the Irish Labourer, 1848 ; Heath, F. G., English Peasantry, 1874 ; Jefferies, R., Hodge and His Masters, 1880.

The Horse presents peculiar difficulties to the bibliographer. The breeding and use of Horses employed in agriculture come within my ambit : but there exists a considerable literature about Horses outside my limitations. Excluded are Stable Talk, Schooling, Riding, Racing, Hunting Stables, Shoeing &c. Stephen's "Adventures of a Gentleman in Search of a Horse" is included under Horses in the London Library Catalogue: clearly I must omit, it or I should have to include Black's "Strange adventures of a Phaeton," or even literature like the immortal "One Hoss Shay," of O. W. Holmes.

To those who follow after, a list of the most useful books of reference (to which of course I am greatly indebted) may be serviceable.

ROBERT WATT.

W. T. LOWNDES.

Bibliographer's Manual. 1857.

S. A. ALLIBONE.

Dictionary of British and American Authors, 1877, with Supplement, 1891. The remarkable Index to Agriculture contains 889 names. The Supplement is not indexed, so that according to the Preface the Index is only up to 1854.

DONALD McDONALD.

Agricultural Writers (1200—1800); published in 1908, has a good index of 280 names.

FORTESCUE'S Subject Index, 1881—1900 of the British Museum Library.

ROWLAND PROTHERO (Lord Ernle).

"Pioneers and Progress of English Farming," has a list of Writers to 1740: "English Farming, Past and Present," has an appendix of Agricultural Writers to 1700.

ROTHAMSTED. Experimental Station Library Catalogue of the printed books on Agriculture, published between 1471 and 1840.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY of England, Catalogue of the Library, 1918, includes everything up to that date in the Library.

DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY mentions every writer of importance. In using this noble work the bibliographer's rule must be "First catch your Author, and then you may find what he wrote." But it is obvious that many agricultural writers were humble folk, often obsessed of perhaps one idea, and with one trifling book to their credit, who had no claim to be included in the D.N.B.

POLLARD & REDGRAVE. "A short title Catalogue of Books printed in England, Scotland and Ireland, 1475 to 1640," 1926, is a superb piece of Bibliography. As it has at present no Subject index, I have been at some pains to read through all the 619 pages, containing no less than 26,143 entries, in the hope of discovering hidden treasures: but indeed there were very few that had escaped the vigilance of preceding bibliographers; so I think we may assume that, at any rate up to the year 1640, finality has almost been reached.

HALKETT AND LAING'S Dictionary of Anonymous and Pseudonymous English Literature, new Edition by Kennedy and Johnson, has been published in five volumes up to the letter S. It will be found invaluable.

On examination of these authorities it will be noted that I am unable to quote any Index to writers who published after Allibone's 1854 and before Fortescue's 1881, a period of 27 years. Probably the R.A.S.E. Catalogue is fairly complete: I have been able to supplement it from my own collection: but the waifs and strays are extraordinary elusive.

It may be a great saving of labour to the bibliographer if he realizes that all the lists published by writers anterior to Allibone are embodied in his book. But Allibone is by no means infallible; he repeats many errors, particularly of dates, and I have detected some omissions. Moreover Allibone includes a very large number of American authors in his total of 889 names, as well as many books which I cannot include within my definition as Agricultural.

In the preface to Mr. McDonald's Agricultural Writers he tells us that his "list comprehends every British writer of whom any notice can be found from the most careful researches." His 280 names includes many writers on Law, Surveying, Orchards, Forestry, Horsemanship, Farriery, Bees, etc., which my own definition excludes. Yet a hasty examination of his list up to the year 1800 discloses the omission of at least 90 Agricultural writers. No blame attaches to him:

no doubt my own omissions from the next century's output will be found to be many more than his : but I mention the fact as illustrative of the difficulty of arriving at finality in bibliography.

I would warn those who consult Donaldson's Agricultural Biography that, useful as the Biographies are, his dates and his spelling of names of authors are very inaccurate. There are, for instance, 22 mistakes in the Index of Authors' names.

The Catalogues of the R.A.S.E. and of Rothamsted are really admirable examples of modern bibliography ; but in using them one must remember that they are merely Catalogues of what are in the Libraries, and not complete lists of either Authors or of their Books.

Searches have been made in the Libraries of Trinity College, Dublin, the Irish National Library, the Royal Dublin Society, the Irish Department of Agriculture, the Highland and Agricultural Society, the National Library of Scotland, the National Library of Wales, the London Library, and of course the British Museum ; unfortunately the absence of a complete subject index to the British Museum Library prevents a thorough exploration of its contents.

To Professor Shearer of Edinburgh University, who directed a search through the Edinburgh Libraries ; and to Mr. Edward Phelps of Dublin, whose researches in the Library of Trinity College yielded a large number of authors who had escaped me, I desire to express my sincere thanks for help which has been invaluable.
